WHAT TO PACK FOR YOUR SOUTH AFRICAN SAFARI

We've put together a general guide of what to pack for your African Safari. Temperatures can range from summer highs of around 104°F (40°C) to cold winters of close to 32°F (0°C) and can either be very dry or extremely wet or humid. This list ensures that you're prepared for all eventualities, regardless of which way the weather decides to turn during your Safari trip.

The first thing to consider is your 30kg baggage allowance. Another important thing to note is that the domestic flight baggage allowance is only 23kg, so if you're flying between cities in South Africa pack to those limitations to avoid additional fees. Don't forget to leave a little space for extra souvenirs you may collect along the way.

Opt for neutral colours, especially olive and dark greens, avoiding white as much as possible. White increases your visibility to the animals and can get dirty very quickly. There is a daily laundry service, so you only really need to pack 3 - 4 days' worth of clothing.

In terms of medication, we do have a fully stocked First Aid kit at the lodge, and South Africa does have good medical facilities and pharmacies, but it's always a good idea to be prepared. So, think about bringing painkillers, plasters, anti-allergy tablets, diarrhoea medication, cough medicine, and especially any chronic medication you may need.

Below is a checklist of our ideal packing list for a South African Safari:
